

WHAT IS APHASIA?

Aphasia is a communication impairment that results from damage to the brain. For most people with aphasia, the brain injury is a stroke, but aphasia may result from a head injury, brain infection, tumor, disease or other cause. People with aphasia may exhibit mild to severe impairment in talking, reading, writing and/or understanding what people say.

All sessions will encourage clients to communicate in whichever manner is most functional for them.

Individual treatment sessions will be developed with the specific needs of the client in mind. Evidence-based treatments will be employed.

Group sessions will give all clients an opportunity to practice skills learned in the individual sessions in a “communication-safe” environment. Group sessions will include practice in all expressive communication modes, including talking, writing, drawing and gesturing. There will also be practice in all receptive communication modes, including auditory comprehension, reading comprehension, as well as
